

CASE STUDY

Annouska joined the trust in May 2014 as an admin assistant within the Business & performance team. Before joining the trust Annouska worked within the private sector and worked on projects which inspired her to look further into a project/ business management career. Shortly after starting in the trust Annouska became a personal assistant to the North Dorset locality manager.

“I have always wanted to build my career and shortly after joining the trust I wanted to become more involved in the project & business side of things.”

Annouska is currently completing an advanced (L3) apprenticeship in Support services for HealthCare. She is hoping to complete this qualification earlier than the full 18 month timescale.

The apprenticeship has been a great way for Annouska to learn about the role of other support services across the trust and how the work they do impacts everyday working.

Since Annouska started the apprenticeship she has provided admin support to both the out of acute hospitals project and the West Dorset vanguard project. This has involved Annouska to collate data and build relationships with external commissioners & GPs.

As Annouska had been out of education for a while, the apprenticeship was the perfect course to further her skills and develop her career path.

After completing the programme Annouska aims to enrol at University to study Business operations and project management at degree level.

“Having not been to university the apprenticeship has opened the doors to many progressive opportunities, including potential jobs and further education.”

“I would recommend the apprenticeship to any age whether you are looking to progress or just develop your skills for your current role”
